Why are factory gate prices rising in China?

Factory gate prices in China rose at their fastest pace in more than a quarter of a century as record coal prices intensified inflationary pressures on businesses and manufacturers. The producer price index rose 10.7 per cent in September compared with a year earlier, official data showed on Thursday, the highest rate of increase since 1995.

How much did the producer price index rise in September?

The producer price index rose 10.7 per cent in September compared with a year earlier, official data showed on Thursday, the highest rate of increase since 1995. In August, PPI added 9.5 per cent.

Why did consumer prices rise in Beijing?

Consumer prices edged higher for the first time since January, official data showed on Wednesday, as Beijing seeks to stimulate domestic consumption to counter oversupply and overcome a prolonged property sector slump.

Are China's power shortages pushing up prices?

Sheana Yue, assistant economist at Capital Economics, said there were few signs that power shortages were pushing up prices of finished consumer goods, adding that factory gate inflation in China “won’t stay this high for long”. “Sooner or later, coal and metal prices are likely to drop back as property construction slows,” she said.
